NEW CABINET IN FRANCE TO HAVE ONLY A SCANT MARGIN

FOREIGN POLICY

No Radical Changes Anticipated By Press

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 14.—The official list of the election results gives the state of the parties as follows:—

Conservatives	20
Rebublicans	117
Left Republicans	52
Radicals and Radical Socialists	139
Republican Socialists	35
Socialists	102
Communists	29

Results still awaited are: Colonies 10, second ballots 4, the Department of the North one. On the basis of these figures the Right and Center parties muster 264 seats, against 305 of the Left, including Communists, or 276 without Communists. The new Chamber will thus be divided in almost equal masses of the Right and Left. Much depends on the direction of gravitation of the Deputies on the Borderland between the two main bodies. The balance of parties seems to justify the propheey of small majorities and frequent crises in the Chamber.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 13.—It is understood that M. Poincare has decided not to go to Chequers, in view of the result of the elections.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 13.—The Radical Socialist ex-Premier, M. Painleve, in an interview in which he explained the attitude of the Left bloc, stressed that France's desire for peace was based on the principle of reparation, and that had faith on the part of Germany would have for her very disastrous consequences. "Europe," he said, "could only enjoy a peaceful future if the goodwill and conviction of France met with goodwill and honest and continued execution of obligations on the part of Germany.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 13.—The newspapers generally consider that, while the swing to the Left will have some influence on domestic policy, it is extremely improbable that it will affect foreign policy. They lay stress on the success of the Socialists as contrasted with the small gains of the Communists and express the opinion that the main issue will be high cost of living and nex taxation.

The Journal recalls that many of the Left have declared themselves partisans of M. Poincare's foreign policy.

The Matin thinks that M. Poincare could find a majority, but he is of the opinion that it is more normal for the victorious parties to assume office.

M. Tardieu, who was himself defeated, in the Echo National blames the Moderates for his own defeat, saying that they did not show enough fight.

The Communist newspaper, the Humanite, declares that disillusion will rapidly follow the advent of the Radical-Socialist, M. Herriot, and the Socialist, M. Renaudel, and that the Communists will immediately demand a full amnesty, evacuation of the Ruhr, recognition of the Soviet and abolition of the taxation schemes.

The Radical journal, the Ere Nouvelle, says that the election

The latter demanded the customary apologies, recognition of the extraterritoriality of a foreign mission, punishment of those responsible for the searching of the trade delegation's offices and payment of an idemnity.

The Russo-German railway conference, for which the German delegates have arrived, has been postponed sine die owing to the present dispute between the two Governments.

Labor's Foreign Policy Defined By Macdonald In Albert Hall Speech

Nationalism Is Not Agression But Self-Respect, Premier Asserts In Address Before Women's Organization; Urges All To Aid In Disarmament

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 13.—Defining the Government's foreign policy at a Labor Women's Demonstration at the Albert Hall today, the Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, declared that he was a convinced and unbending Nationalist. He respected national traditions and characteristics. It would be a very bad day for the world if the diversities of humanity, created by so many experiences of race, creed and clime, became sandpapered into one feature. But neither was it his ideal to run Nationalism so hard that it became a pest to anyone trying to make peace. Nationalism was not aggression but self-respect. Therefore the Labor Government's foreign policy was to bring about great peace and union. He appealed to the small European nations, no less than the Great Powers, to come in and enable the advancement of a policy of disarmament.

Referring to the Dawes report, Mr. MacDonald admitted that there were some things in it of which he was a little bit suspicions, but he believed that the adoption of the report as a whole would give Europe a new chance of finding its feet. He urged all the Powers concerned to take up the same attitude and trust to the sense of justice of the world to see right done in the end.

LONDON GREETS ROYAL VISITORS IN HIGH STATE

King and Queen Of Rumania Accorded Reception In City

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 13.—The King and Queen of Rumania had a great reception in the City today when they drove to the Guildhall and received an address of welcome from the City in a gold casket in the presence of the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, Prince Henry, Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught and other members of the Royal family. The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Miss MacDonald, and all the principal Secretaries of State, Mr. Winston Churchill, Sir Joseph Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin and Mr. and Mrs. Asquith were also present.

The Lord Mayor in his speech recalled that this was the first occasion that Their Majesties had paid a ceremonial visit to England since their accession in 1914. He referred to the increase of British commercial interests in Rumania.

The King of Rumania, replying to the Lord Mayor's toast, rejoiced to hear that the city of London appreciated the efforts of Rumania to recover herself. He was convinced that Britain would continue to support her endeavors by strengthening and developing British trade with Rumania, whose potentialities in oil and other products offered a wide field of activity to British capital and trade.

Labor Is Sustained On McKenna Duties

VOTE 317 TO 252

Only Nine Liberals Stand Against Government

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 13.—Mr. Stanley Baldwin's motion of censure of the Government, declaring it inexpedient to remove the McKenna duties amidst the present distresses, was rejected by the House of Commons today by 317 votes to 252.

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 13.—The House of Commons was crowded today for the debate on Mr. Stanley Baldwin's vote of censure.

The former Premier, moving that it was inexpedient to remove the McKenna duties amidst the present distresses, said that British motorcars known on the Australian market were superceded by American cars during the war and it was still doubtful whether we could recover the market. This decision would make it still more difficult. Furthermore, Canada benefited by the preference given her under the McKenna duties and the production of Canadian motorcars had increased largely, aided by American capital invested in Canada to get the benefit of the preference. He feared that the Government had dealt a blow to Canadian trade, which, coupled with the Government's action in regard to imperial reference, would make the Dominions less responsive to any idea of reciprocity. He suggested an impartial inquiry into the question of the McKenna duties.

Mr. Philip Snowden, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared that the motor trade had had ample notice of the change of conditions. He aroused much opposition by attacking an agitation alleged to have been carried on by employers among workers, and asked what good the duties had done to the motor trade, seeing that 75 percent of British Manufacturers were in the hands of banks. Exports in 1922 had been lower than in 1913, while during the same period imports had doubled. The effect of the duties had ceased to be protective because British manufacturers specialised in a British type to the exclusion of American competition. The British motorcar trade, Mr. Snowden declared, would find that it did not want protection when it got rid of watered capital and put its affairs on a sound financial basis. There could be no compromise over the withdrawal of the duties.

Vigorous opposition to abolition of the duties was voiced by Mr. A. A. Purcell, Labor Member for Coventry, on behalf of his constituents and also by Major-General J. E. B. Seely, Liberal Member for the Isle of Wight.

The motion of censure was rejected by 317 votes to 252. Nine Liberals supported the motion. No Labor Member voted against the Government, though Mr. Purcell abstained.

CHURCH UNITY CALLED FOR AT N.C.C. MEETING

Bishop L. H. Roots Addresses Annual Assembly On Its Functions

It was announced at the session of the National Christian Council yesterday morning that Rev. E. C. Lobenstine, a well-known member of the American community in Shanghai, had consented to take up his duties as one of the full-time secretaries of the Council. This announcement was warmly received on the part of all the members.

The morning session yesterday was largely taken up with routine matters of organisation such as deciding upon the rules of order, welcome to visitors and such matters. It is a rule of the Council that any member who is absent from the country for more than one year must resign and another person be elected to take his place. Those who are absent for only a few months may be represented by substitutes. This matter of substitution was attended to at yesterday morning.

NAME COMMITTEE

The Business Committee was named as follows: T. Z. Koo, Chairman, T. C. Chao, Uong Gang Huo, Miss Bielson, K. L. Pao, J. L. Proctor, Miss Katie Woo, R. J. McMullen, J. O. Gotteberg, Shen Wen Ching, D. E. Hoste, E. C. Lobenstine, Fletcher Brockman, S. C. Huang, Dr. Luella Miner.

The following minute secretaries were also elected: English: Rev. Edwin Marx and Rev. F. G. Oaley. Chinese: Rev. Chia Yuming, Rev. Lin Yu-shu.

The following interpreters were appointed: Miss Kyoong, Mr. Gideon Chen, Rev. T. K. Shen and Rev. R. E. Chandler.

Dr. Hodgkin in his report for the Executive Committee mentioned two or three matters of importance. First, that the Rev. E. C. Lobenstine had accepted the invitation to become one of the secretaries. It will be remembered that he was for some years the Secretary of the China Continuation Committee and had much to do with the organisation of the National Christian Conference, out of which the N. C. C. developed. The Executive Committee wished also to reiterate its cordial invitation to Dr. Cheng Chin Yi to join the secretarial staff upon his return from America in the summer

BISHOP ROOTS RETIRING

It was also announced that in accordance with the action of the Board of Bishops of the Shen Kung Kuei, Bishop Roots must retire from his active work as one of the full-time secretaries. It is felt by a large section of the

TRIES SUICIDE IN OFFICES OF U. S. MARSHAL

Foreign Woman Complainant Drinks Corros.ve Sublimate; Will Recover

An attempt at suicide—according to all indication—was made yesterday by a lady in the offices of the United States Court for China. Prompt medical attention, after a hurried trip to hospital, revived the self-intended victim, a prospective complainant in a court case, and she is expected to recover.

The would-be suicide is one Natalie Buhris, who some time ago complained to the authorities that a sailor had assaulted her on the Bund. She gave what she believed to be his name and sought to have him punished for injuries she had received and for damage to her clothes. Apparently the name she gave was fictitious, for though every endeavor has been made by the authorities to trace the man they have not succeeded up to the present.

Yesterday morning the complainant went to the U. S. Court building and there was seen by Mr. Thurston Porter, the United States Marshal, who asked her to step into the District Attorney's office while he telephoned to see if there was any further news about the man she wished to prosecute. The woman was crying bitterly at the time and while Mr. Porter's back was turned she sagged in her chair, stopped crying and appeared to be going into a faint. On going to her aid Mr. Porter found that she was grasping a bottle containing a liquid, some of which she appeared to have drunk. Some of the liquid was also spilled over her dress.

Major C. P. Holcomb, who was in the building, at once got in touch with physicians, two of whom arrived shortly thereafter. The woman was removed to St. Luke's Hospital and was given treatment, as a result of which she is expected to recover. The liquid she drank is believed to have been corrosive sublimate.

DR. SUN DEAD SAY REUTER'S; KUOMINGTANG DENY REPORT

Local Headquarters Of Canton Party Claim Untruth

NO CONFIRMATION

Relatives Here Say Southern Chief Is Well

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, May 14.—Dr. Sun Yat-sen died at 4.30 this morning.

While reports from other sources confirmed the Hongkong telegram carried by Reuters on the death of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, officials at the local headquarters of the Kuomingtang Party are sure that the Southern Generalissimo is well and is attending to his usual business.

When interviewed by a representative of The China Press, they showed two telegrams. The first sent to them yesterday at noon from Canton by General Tan Yen-kai, ex-tuchun of Hunan who is assisting Dr. Sun in his campaign against the North, reads:

"The Chief Executive has completely recovered from his headache and is attending to his official duties as usual. Kindly inform me when Governor Hu Han-min is returning to Canton."

The other message received here yesterday and sent by the secretariat of the Generalissimo at 3 a.m. yesterday morning was as follows:

"In reply to your inquiry of the 13th, we wish to say that following his presence at the Canton Christian College at its annual celebration recently, the Generalissimo suffered a severe cold through a sudden change of climatic conditions. He was told to rest for several days by the doctors, but he has now entirely recovered and has, since yesterday, been attending office as usual."

Death Denied At Headquarters Here

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Shanghai, May 14.—Mr. T. V. Soong (Dr. Sun Yat-sen's brother-in-law), of the China International Corporation, Shanghai, writes to us under today's date as follows:

"In view of the repeated rumors of Dr. Sun Yat-sen's death, I shall be pleased to have you publish the following:

"The Kuomintang here received a cable, sent last night (May 13) from Dr. Sun's Headquarters in Canton, in response to an enquiry after Dr. Sun's health, reporting that owing to a cold contracted when he addressed a laborers' gathering at the Canton Christian College Dr. Sun was confined to his room from 4th to 9th. He has now completely recovered, and has attended office since the 10th. There is thus absolutely no foundation to the rumor of his severe illness or demise."

It will be noted that the telegram which the letter states was received from Dr. Sun's Headquarters was dated May 13, while the report of the death from Hongkong says it occurred this morning (May 14).

President Ship Captain Is Acquitted On Charge Of Discharging Oil Here

Following a lengthy hearing yesterday before U. S. Commissioner N. E. Lurton, a charge brought against Captain A. O. Lustie of the Steamer President McKinley of having permitted oil to be discharged from his vessel while within the limits of the harbor was dismissed.

Mr. H. D. Rodger, acting district attorney, with whom was Mr. M. Reader Harris, representing the Chinese Maritime Customs, appeared for the prosecution. Major C. P. Holcomb defended.

F. H. Tanner, berthing officer, gave evidence to the effect that on March 16 at about 9 a.m., while bound for the s.s. Nellore he was passed by the President McKinley, and he observed a continuous stream of oil coming from the port side of that vessel about eighteen inches above the water line. When it left the vessel the oil made a stream about fifteen feet wide on the surface of the water, though afterwards it spread until it covered the whole surface of the river. Witness went on board the Nellore and called the attention of the chief officer and the pilot to the oil. He subsequently reported the matter to the Harbor Department. There was no oil on the water before the McKinley passed and the place from which it was coming was situated amidships. He saw the oil being discharged for about seven minutes.

In answer to the court witness gave it as his impression that the oil was coming from a discharge pipe amidships on the port side.

COVERED THE RIVER

Robert Longworth, acting assistant harbormaster, said that in consequence of a report from the previous witness, he went on to the river and saw the oil which practically covered the river in the No. 10 section, just above the waterworks, the width of the oily streak narrowing down towards the 11th section. He considered this discharge of oil into the river a very serious matter.

Major Holcomb, cross-examining: What becomes of this oil? A. Some of it soaks into the wooden piles of the different wharves, some is left on the banks as the tide recedes, some is left on the ship's sides and some is no doubt drawn into the suction of the waterworks.

Q. Has any report ever been made of any oil being drawn into the suction of the waterworks? A. Not in any particular case.

Q. Do you know how long this oil lasted on the surface of the water? A. Certainly it was there until 10 a.m. the next day.

Q. Covering the whole river? A. The following morning it was not covering the whole river, but it was in patches twenty to thirty feet wide.

Q. Where is the intake of the Shanghai Waterworks? Under the surface of the water? A. Yes, quite likely.

Q. And doesn't oil float on the water? A. Yes, but the tide is not always at the same level. As the tide falls the oil might very likely be left in the suction pipes.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE

Q. Do you know whether anybody connected with the harbor master's department has investigated to find out whether oil from the river has been sucked into the city water supply? A.

Navy 'Y' Plans Program; Woman's Club To Conduct Tour

The U. S. Transport Chaumont, with over a thousand discharged Sailors from Manila, Hongkong Shanghai and Yangtsze ports, left Shanghai yesterday afternoon for San Francisco on her voyage to New York. yesterday morning the U. S. S. Pensacola with a ship's company of 300 officers and enlisted men, arrived from Manila en route to Chefoo. The U. S. S. Huron, flag ship of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, will leave for Chefoo on Sunday. Admiral Thomas Washington, Commander in Chief of the Asiatic Fleet, who left Shanghai last week will join the flagship later. The Black Hawk and destroyers expect to leave at the end of this month.

The Navy "Y" has three big events on the program for sailors for the remaining nights of this week. Tonight Prof. C. H. Robertson, of the Y. M. C. A. National Committee of China., will give a demonstration of the Radio telephone and telegraph with a profusion of apparatus at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock. During the evening there will be a short broadcasting concert. This lecture will be of especial interest to sailors since one of the most interesting and important part of a warship's equipment is the radio.

The American Woman's Club is sending many cars—a hundred, are expected—to the Navy "Y" on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock to take American sailors on a sightseeing tour of the city. The sailors, who know so little of the beautiful districts of Shanghai beyond the business part of the city, will doubtlesk consider this ride one of the chief events of their visit to this port. Many of the ladies of the Club will accompany their cars to explain places of interest to their sailor tourists.

The small Yangtsze patrol ship Palos, with a crew of only 60 men, will give a sailor's concert for the whole fleet at the Navy "Y" on Saturday night at 8 o'clock. During the long stretch of 18 months since their last visit to Shanghai, while in lonely ports far up the Yangtsze, the crew had to amuse themselves and, with the encouragement of their officers, they organised a good company of entertainers. This company will give a show on Saturday night to include music by an orchestra, singing, fancy dancing, impersonations and other vaudeville stuff.

Following the show at 9:30 there will be a dance as a "farewell" to the U. S. S. Huron.

shows France's desire for peace. The new Chamber will certainly be inclined to conciliation, but this must find its counterpart in Germany. The paper urges the necessity of Germany rapidly fulfilling the experts' recommendations.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, May 13.—Commenting on the elections and the Ruhr question, the London Morning Post says: "The French electors do not condemn M. Poincare's policy. That is approved, too, in its main lines by M. Herriot and M. Briand. The occupation is due to the decision of France and not that of M. Poincare. The French nation is determined to obtain from the Reich reparations for the devastations of the provinces and guarantees against fresh aggression".

The London Times declares: "The result of the elections, was as unexpected in England as in France, but M. Poincare's opponents did not attack the Ruhr policy either before or during the elections".

The German press recognises that it is necessary for Germans not to found vain hopes on the elections as France's foreign policy cannot be completely modified. The Vossische Zeitung states that the new Chamber will follow the same policy as the preceding one.

The New York Times declares that it would be dangerous for Germany to interpret the results of the elections as a repudiation of M. Poincare's foreign policy. It will be necessary for Mr. MacDonald energetically to support the new Government. The New York Morning World declares that an understanding between the British and French Governments would give a chance of success to the Dawes plan.

Stress Churches 'Unity At Christian Council Meeting

Christian community that this is a very great loss to the Christian Movement in China. He will still keep as close a relation to the Council as possible under the circumstances. Bishop Roots has done such a remarkable piece of work during the past year that expressions of regret are heard on all sides at this decision of the Board of Bishops.

Dr. Hodgkin also called attention to a map which was hung in the front of the room showing the cities which the secretaries had visited during the past year. The map revealed the fact that the secretaries or their representatives had covered nearly all of Eastern and Central China, from Kirin to Canton.

In the afternoon Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin presented the report on "Retreats and Evangelism," and discussion followed. He called attention to the real importance of this method in Christian work. By getting together the leaders in small groups for a period of two or three days they are enabled to do some real thinking on the great problems before the church. We often work very hard without having thought out clearly before hand just what it is we are trying to do, he said. The committee believes that through these retreats fresh spiritual forces are set free. They give an actual experience of what unity in Christ means. Dr. Hodgkin said very earnestly. "We shall get Christian unity as a spiritual experience in Christ and not by organisation."

At the close of the report many took part in the discussion, bearing witness to the great value of the retreats which had been held in widely scattered parts of the nation. It was exceedingly inspiring to hear the enthusiastic reports from both Chinese and foreigners on the value of these retreats.

The members of the Council were welcomed and entertained on Tuesday evening by the Shanghai Missionary Association. The address of the evening on the work of the Council was given by Dr. Harold Balme, President of Shantung Christian University.

TELLS OF WORK

Bishop Logan H. Roots presented the report on behalf of the secretaries. He said in part: "It gives me a great deal of pleasure to speak on behalf of the staff. It has been my good fortune to work with the secretarial staff in the most perfect harmony. Our relations have been delightful in spite of many strong differences of opinion. In real intimacy and the mutual exchange of different opinions we have reached a unity that has been a daily inspiration to the staff.

"The work of the Council is to do what no church of itself could do. There is no other body able to do the work which this N. C. C. is set to do.

"In this annual meeting we have met to do serious, comprehensive thinking, to revalue the work of the Council and to determine the points of chief emphasis in that work. Where shall we speed we put the emphasis during the coming year? Where shall we speed up or slow down?

"The Council together with the secretaries are to be for the whole church, not legs to walk with but antennae by which surrounding conditions are discovered and the road ahead for the church is made clear.

STRESSES UNITY

"The most important subject before us is the Chinese Church—its relations to missions (here before there was any church) and its relation to the great and growing needs of China.

"I believe that what God means by the way in which he has gathered us together from the four corners of the earth to build a church in China, is that these subjects should be before us in order that in so doing the work of the church we shall be more closely knit together. This meeting may be a time when we can get rid of the prejudices and the things which separate us from each other. We have here in this gathering an opportunity to come to understand each other and then to go back to help forward the unity of the church and to help different bodies of Christians' to bring the essential unity of our experience and of our aims."

We have made no examination ourselves, but we have had a report from the waterworks which says it is a dangerous practice.

Charles Hess, sergeant of the river police, said he was on duty on the morning in question and noticed large quantities of oil on the river on the Footung side. It was black sticky oil, such as would be pumped out of the bilges. The McKinley was the only oil burning ship going in or out of the harbor that morning. In reply to Major Holcomb, witness stated that the waterworks for his district were shut down a few years ago because oil got into the works. The oil had got into the settling tanks.

Mr. H. G. McKenzie, Customs Marine Surveyor, was about to give evidence as to whether a discharge of oil could come from the President McKinley, amidships, when Major Holcomb stated that his case would be that there could not be any discharge of oil on the port side amidships, and offered facilities for the court to go and examine the ship itself, which was done during the tiffin adjournment.

Mr. H. E. Hillman, harbor master, produced a letter from the Shanghai Waterworks Co., in which it was stated that the practice of discharging oil in the Whangpoo was a dangerous one. The company was continuously pumping water from the river and if any oil got into the works, it might take weeks and even months to eradicate and during that time it would probably be impossible to supply the International Settlement with either usual quantity or quality of water.

Under the harbor regulations it was forbidden for ships to discharge oil into the Whangpoo, and the Customs instead of bringing such cases to court could prevent the working and clearance of the vessel, which in the case of the President McKinley might involve the owner in a loss of Gold $1,000 per day.

DEFENDANT TESTIFIES

Defendant was put on the stand to state that there was no opening on the port side of the ship from which oil could be discharged.

In renewing the offer for the court to see the ship, Major Holcomb emphasised that the United States Shipping Board was only too anxious to assist the Harbor authorities and if they had been guilty of discharging oil in this instance they would have pleaded guilty, but they believed a mistake had been made.

Mr. Rodger said it was the duty of American ships using this port to observe the regulations, and at present they were not doing it. Only recently the captain of the President Grant was charged with the same offence and when she was pulling out after the case had been tried, she commenced pumping oil into the water.

The Commissioner: Was that something which occurred after the last case?

Mr. Rodger: Yes.

The Commissioner: You have no right to comment on that. That is a matter which you can bring before the court in the usual way.

Mr. Rodger: Major Holcomb has stated that the United States Shipping Board desired to live up to the regulations. The American ships are the only oil burning vessels which come to this port and every time the President boats come in there is oil on the water. The fact that the Customs authorities, instead of holding the vessel up and causing a serious loss of money, bring these people to court entitles them to some consideration.

Major Holcomb: That is practically making a threat that if the court does not convict they will not come to the American Court, but take the law into their own hands.

The court then adjourned for tiffin and to inspect the President McKinley.

After tiffin the court assembled at the side of the vessel, where it was found that there was no outlet above the water line through which oil might be discharged, as described by the first witness for the prosecution.

A motion by Major Holcomb that the case be dismissed was denied by the court.

NONE DISCHARGED, CLAIM

Evidence was given by the defendant to the effect that no oil was discharged from the ship and that there was no possibility of a leak, inasmuch as the tank in which a leak had been discovered had been emptied and cleaned, prior to its being repaired in Hongkong. Some time after March 16, when he knew that proceedings were to be taken in the matter, he spoke to the chief engineer about it, and the chief engineer told him that on the morning in question he saw that the ship was passing through a large patch of oil on its way out of the harbor. There were other vessels besides the American vessels and Norwegians using oil fuel, of which witness gave a number of examples.

In cross-examination Mr. Reader Harris referred to a letter sent by the company's agent to the harbormaster in which he stated that the discharge of oil was due to force majeure, there being a leak in one of the tanks. Witness stated that the agent at the time of writing that letter was not sufficiently informed of the matter, and before witness returned to Hongkong.

Elv Christiansen, the chief engineer, stated that on the morning in question he had occasion to come on deck, and noticed that the ship was passing through a patch of oil. He did not mention it to the captain until he heard that these proceedings were to be brought. He did not pump any oil out of the vessel that day, nor did he pump out the bilge tanks in which there might have been some oil, though not enough to correspond with what the witnesses for the prosecution saw.

WOULD BE SERIOUS

Captain W. I. Eisler, representative of American Lloyd's, testified that he surveyed the leaking tank on the President McKinley. It had been thoroughly cleaned out at that time and contained absolutely no oil. Witness was of the opinion that if oil did get into the waterworks it would affect them seriously, clogging up the filter beds and necessitating a removal of the filtering medium.

Mr. O. D. Martinez, the company's agent testified that he wrote the letter referred to by Mr. Harris without information from the ship. He did so because it would be an extraordinary thing for the ship to discharge oil into the harbor unless it was due to force majeure.

In his argument for the prosecution, Mr. Harris, contended that the original mistake of Mr. Tanner's as to oil being pumped from an outlet on the port side did not vitiate the rest of his testimony. He stated that before the President McKinley passed him the river was clear of oil, but that afterwards he saw the oil on the water. Counsel also commented on what he called a change in the defence, the first story being one of a leak, and the second that the discharge must have been by some other vessel than the President McKinley.

Major Holcomb argued that he was entitled to a dismissal on the ground that the prosecution had not proved beyond reasonable doubt that the oil came from the President McKinley, and on this ground the court dismissed the case.

Perhaps in this case the police thought they had reached the limit of discretion, but the statement that the Home Office had actually notified the prefectures that they were not to control public indignation is very interesting.

THREE ARE HELD IN BAIKAL ROAD MURDER MYSTERY

A coolie and two amahs were ordered held in custody by the Mixed Court yesterday in connection with a ghastly murder which came to the attention of the Wayside police Tuesday.

The murder came to light when a woman living in the lower portion of 1364 Baikal Road reported to the police that blood was dripping down into her room. Visiting the room above the police found the two amahs, Siang Woo-sz and Ching Zia-sz, and the coolie, Moo Ching-yoong, who appeared to be in a state of repressed excitement. There were bloodstains about but the body was not discovered until a skin box was opened. The victim, a man, had evidently been shot through the head. In the box was also a knife, while a basket of ammunition was found under the bed.

An inquest was begun yesterday and, as stated, the three Chinese arrested were ordered held. There will be a further hearing tomorrow.

Brave Farmers Win Clash With Bandits

(China Press Correspondence)

Suchowfu, Kiangsu, May 8.—Indicative of the changing spirit of the country-folk of this section is an incident which occurred a few days ago at a little village near the Anhwei-Kiangsu border which resulted in seven bandits being killed outright and two captured and executed later.

The robbers, all well armed, attempted to swoop down upon the village, but a group of farmers organised rapidly, and with nothing more than spears for arms, held the invaders at bay until a militia force could be obtained from a nearby market town. The courage of the farmers, it is thought, can be attributed to their membership in the White Plume Society, one of the objects of which seems to be the suppression of bandits.

Golf Competition For Championship Of China To Be Held Here In Fall

Local Club Announces Tournament, Open To All Clubs In East, And Invites Entries; Date To Be In October

By Westa

A project that the Shanghai Golf Club has had in mind for some time took definite shape yesterday in an announcement by Secretary Haves, on behalf of the committee, that an open amateur tournament for the championship of China would be held here this autumn, probably in October.

It will be the aim of the Shanghai Golf Club to make this championship a truly representative test, and to attract players from all over the Orient. To that end Mr. Haves will send notices fo all the leading clubs in China, Japan and the Philippines, notifying them of the proposed championship tournament and inviting them to send in their entries.

Among the clubs to be invited to send in entries are the following:

Hungjao Golf Club.
Royal Hongkong Golf Club.
Amoy Golf Club.
Mukden Golf Club.
Tientsin Golf Club.
Weihaiwei Golf Club.
Port Edward Golf Club, Weihaiwei.
Hankow Golf Club.
Nanking Golf Club.
Peking Golf Club.
Tsingtao Golf Club.
Foochow Golf Club.
Manila Golf Club.
Tokio Golf Club.
Yokohama Golf Club.
Kobe Golf Club.
Hodogaya Golf Club.

The championship will not be restricted, however, to members of these clubs. On the contrary any member of a recognised club who happens to be in Shanghai at the time will be eligible to compete.

The announcement from the golf club states that a trophy has been presented by a resident of Shanghai, and that this trophy will be inscribed with the name of the winner but will remain here, the winner to receive a cup in token of his victory.

The actual date of the competition will be decided upon later, but it is anticipated that this date will be either the 19th or 26th of October. The championship, presumably, will extend over two days, as the play will be over seventy-two holes. The entrance fee will be five dollars. Entries must be in on or before October 20.

Reserve Co. S.V.C. Shoots For May And St. Dunstan's Cups

The May Monthly Cup and St. Dunstan's Cup Competition of the Reserve Co., S.V.C., were held at the Rifle Range on the 11th inst.

The conditions of both competitions were Classification Practices Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 12 of the Annual Musketry Course, Service Conditions. There were 26 entries for the St. Dunstan's Cup and the entrance fees will be forwarded to the St. Dunstan's Hostel for Blind Sailors and Soldiers in due course.

A changeable light and 3 o'clock wind, made shooting difficult and adversely affected the scores especially in the snap shooting practices.

A drill was held at the conclusion of the Cup Competitions and after the drill, over twenty members attended the Tiffin, at the Range, including Capt. C. H. Ryde whose continued interest in the well being of his late command is a source of intense gratification to all his comrades of the "Old Guard."

Capt. A. W. Studd registered his 5th win on the St. Dunstan's Challenge Cup, winning this magnificent trophy outright.

Capt. C. T. Ryde on congratulating the winner of the St. Dunstan's Cup said that he was authorised to state that the donor of the St. Dunstan's Challenge Cup would present another Challenge Cup for competition, in order that the good work for the Hostel should continue, the conditions would be left entirely to the Unit Musketry Board.

Bananas Finishes In Second Place, With Penlu Third

Boroon, with Lieut. Neill up, carried off first honors in the Champions on the Third Day of the Spring Race Meeting of the Peking Club held at Paomachang on May 12 with Bananas, ridden by Mr. R. S. Davis, second, and Penlu (Mr. D J. Stewart) third.

Only four ponies started in this, the main event, Bananas took the lead, until the quarter mile post, when Boroon, outdistancing the other two ponies ran neck to neck with Bananas. Boroon, however, soon shot out, and increased his distance one length from Bananas. At the three quarter mile Penlu overtook Bananas and secured second place, and challenged Boroon. Unfortunately he could not keep his place: Bananas then came again to the fore, and the race was then between Boroon and Bananas—the former gaining first honors—with latter 2nd and Penlu 3rd. Penlu ran an excellent race, but there was no doubt that Boroon was the best pony. The $5 cash sweep in this race netted the holder of ticket No. 201, the sum of $2,165.

Warm but cloudy weather heralded the day, and the attendance was large: This was re- ran into the $709 mark before the 5th race. There was no excitement before the 3rd event, which seemed a proper mix up. First of all, there was difficulty in getting Quarente Cinco to line up. The latter was particularly obstinate. After two false starts, the field got away, and Quarente Cinco was left at the post. It was thought that the event would be declared no race. Nevertheless the remainder of the field continued, and Nevercadie came in 1st, with Jay 2nd, and Bombay, 3rd. A complaint was lodged by the rider of Quarente Cinco—Mr. Henningsen, that there should be no race, but the objection was overruled.

SOUTH AFRICANS AND SURREY DRAW IN CRICKET GAME

Good Bowling And Batting In County Games

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 13.—The match between Surrey and the South Africans was continued today at the Oval, before a small attendance. The weather was overcast, and the wicket soft. In their first innings Surrey had been dismissed for 223, to which the South Africans had responded with 139 for five wickets. Today the South Africans increased their score to 223, thus making a tie on the first innings. A. D. Nourse scored 62, while Peach took four wickets for 44 runs. Going in a second time Surrey scored 136 for the loss of two wickets (Hobbs 79 not out) and then declared. The South Africans scored 82 for two wickets in their second venture, and the match ended in a draw.

The match at Leyton between Essex and Kent was drawn, Essex scoring three points for leading on the first innings and Kent one point. In Kent's second innings Woolley made 117 not out.

At Portsmouth, the match between Hampshire and Sussex was drawn, Sussex (leading on the first innings) getting three points and Hampshire one point. In Sussex's first innings Bowley scored 85. Tate (Sussex) took five wickets for 38 runs and Gilligan (Sussex) five for 49.

Derby won on the first innings in their match at Leicester against Leicestershire. In Leicester's first innings Bestwick took eight wickets for 36 runs, while in Derby's first innings Geary captured seven wickets for 45.

There was no play at Birmingham, on account of rain, in the match between Warwickshire and Notts.

At Cambridge, Lancashire defeated Cambridge University by two wickets. The Lancashire bowler Parkin took three wickets for 27 runs in the first innings and four for 37 in the second, while R. T. Tyldesley (Lancashire) took six wickets for 42 runs in Cambridge's second innings.

Playing against Worcestershire at Worcester, Glamorganshire won on the first innings. Ryan (Glamorgan) took six wickets for 31 runs in Worcester's first innings.

At Gloucester, Yorkshire defeated Gloucestershire by eight wickets, the scores being: Gloucester, first innings 68 (Kilner taking four wickets for 21 and Macaulay five for 19), second innings 42 (Macaulay seven wickets for 21); Yorkshire, first innings 98, second innings 14 for two wickets.

And Babel Too!

CRUICKSHANK, WEE SCOT, BIG NAME IN AMERICAN GOLF

In Last Round Of Open Championship He Played Seven Holes In One Over 3's

Up from nowhere or the vicinity thereof came Bobby Cruickshank, a wee Scot, to national fame in American golf. Cruickshank tied with Bobby Jones, Atlanta amateur, in the open championship at Inwood and was beaten in the play-off the following afternoon.

Cruickshank was not exactly unheard of before the Inwood classic but nobody figured him seriously in championship calculations. It was conceded in advance that the blue ribbon would go to one of these eight players: Hagen, Sarazen, Hutchison, Kirkwood, Barnes, Jones, MacSmith or Farrell.

At the end of the first day's play Hutchison led the field with two great rounds of 70-72. Jones was next at 71-73. Cruickshank—who is this Cruickshank guy the fans asked—was third at 73-72.

The grim fight lenghtened out. The third round totals were posted. Jones had gone into the lead with 71-73-76—220. Cruickshank was a bang-up second with 73-72-78—223. Hutchison had dropped to third with 70-72-82—224. Hagen, always a fine fighter against odds, had come up to within striking distance with 77-75-73—225.

The final round began, and it was during this ordeal that Cruickshank's greatness both as a fine golfer and a rare fighter made itself manifest. Jones played the first nine in 39, two over par. Then he started home 3-4-3-4-4-3 and it seemed as if nothing could stop him. But on the last three holes he skidded, taking 5-5-6 for a finishing total of 296.

Cruickshank started his final round erratically, but after reaching the sixth tee he played the next seven holes in these thrilling figures: 2-3-3-4-3-4-3, only ONE OVER EVEN THREES! He had now caught Jones and had only to keep reasonably close to par to win.

Cruickshank played the next three holes in 5-5-4. This left him three 4's to take the title. It still looked simple enough. But at the next tee the little war veteran chashed, took three putts and a six.

This left him needing a 3-4 or 4-3 to tie. He got his four at the 17th hole, and at the home hole got his 3 and a tie with Jones, but only after executing one of the boldest and most sensational approach shots in the long history of the game, a 210-yard full iron blast over a water hazard to a tricky, fast green.

The ball stopped eight feet from the cup and Cruickshank dropped it in amid as lusty a shout as ever greeted a halfback scoring the winning touchdown or a baseball hero lining out the winning hit.

What if the tiny thistle was beaten the next day in the play-off, 76 to 78? That one iron shot had lifted him from the realm of the unknowns to the nationally famous.

HAICHOW SEES REAL PROGRESS ON RAIL LINE

Work Of Grading And Building Bridges Proceeding At Good Rate

(China Press Correspondence)

Haichow, Kiangsu, May 8.—The railroad from Hsuchowfu to Haichow looks as if it will be a sure thing before very long. The earth work at this end of the line is just about finished for the distance of ten miles, this being the first section at this end. From the reports there can't be more than about forty miles of earth work to be done yet before the actual road bed is finished. This does not mean that the bridges have been built. There are many small bridges all along the line which take a great deal of labor to build. These bridges will necessarily delay the finishing of the road a good deal. However, there are only two large bridges to be built between the Grand Canal and Haichow. One is at Shin An Cheng and the other at Haichow, both cross the same river.

It is very interesting to see how the engineers are getting around the very difficult job of building the bridge across the river at Haichow. The river here has a big tide from the sea and consequently it is very deep part of the day and later very shallow. Another difficulty, too, is that the river channel changes very often from one side of the main river bed to the other. Building this bridge however was an easy job to the Dutch Engineers. They simply are taking advantage of a big bend in the river by building the bridge on dry land. When the bridge is finished a channel will be cut across the bend and under the bridge and the old river bed will be filled in at the crossing. The Chinese as well as the foreigners were very much interested in seeing how the problem was solved.

It is impossible to tell just how much longer it will be before the railroad is finished, bridges and all, to Haichow. No doubt the earth work will be just about complete by the end of this year and we predict that the trains will be running to Haichow by the end of 1925. The people in this section are expecting a large boom for Haichow in the next few years. Those with money are buying up all the land they can for speculation.

During the past few weeks Haichow has had an epidemic of smallpox and measles. A great many children have died of smallpox. For some unaccountable reason the Chinese in this section cannot be persuaded to be vaccinated until the spring of the year. More than one thousand vaccinations were given during the past month but the pitiful thing is that thousands were not vaccinated before spring and naturally many contracted the desease and died simply because of their superstition about not being vaccinated until the spring of the year.

The Chinese officials and people in general are still very friendly to the foreigners in the Haichow district. The condition of the country is peaceful at the present time. In order that the work of the defense commissioner might be more effective General Bei has had good automobile roads built practically all through the Haichow district. Of course this results in making the evangelistic and medical work of the missionaries very much more effective.

Midsummer Night's Dream, Portrayed By Youngsters, Is Well-Merited Success

One of the most successful performances ever given on any stage in Shanghai was that put on yesterday at the Lyceum by the girls and boys of the Cathedral Schools. The youngsters' performance of Shakespeares "Midsummer Night's Dream" was, in the estimation of most of the audience, fully equal to anything similar that has been given here by well trained adults.

Mr. E. P. Graham-Barrow, headmaster of the Cathedral School for Boys, and well-known for his activities as producer of many of the A.D.C.'s successful productions, was undoubtedly, the guiding spirit responsible for the excellence of the performance, although much credit must be given to Mrs. Goulden who trained the children in the dancing numbers, and to Mrs. Marden who had charge of the singing and got the chorus into such fine shape. Miss Gulston was prompter but her services were not required in a single instance during the afternoon for the small performers were letter perfect in their respective parts.

So enthusiastic was the response of the audience to the clever acting of the children that it is likely that a second performance of the play will be given.

Among the particularly bright stars in the show were Stella Tucker, who had the role of Hermia, Daughter to Egeus, and W. Ortwin, who played Bottom, the weaver.

The dance of the fairies, an exquisite bit which the children carried off with rare technical skill and grace, literally stopped the show and the dancers were obliged to give an encore. These little dancers were Joan Beaumont, Barbara Hawkins, Mary Sleap, Alison Boyd, Margot Everall, Mary Wilkinson, Nancy Moore and Rosemary Taylor.

The chorus, consisting of Elsie Hunter, Eillen Tayler, Evelyn Lucas, Molly Millard, Doris Cheetham, Jean Taylor, Dorothy Rayden, Gloria Kahler, Freda Tuxford, Yvonne Tuxford, Frances Allen, Betty Cain, Kitty Michael, Dorothy Roberts, Joan Jaffee, Rosie Boyes, Mary Carter and Joy Pett, was also especially good and got well-earned applause.

The Spirit Of Mountain Climbing

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

I hope those climbers get to the top of Mr. Everest. I wish I could be there with them. Mountain climbing is the finest exercise in the world for lungs, muscles, nerves and head. The names of the men who first stamp their feet in the eternal snows on the head of the great chief of the mighty Himalayas, and premier of all the mountains of the earth, will be written among the immortals.

Mountain climbing has been called a nineteenth century sport, but already Othello had included it in the heroic tale with which he won the admiration and the heart of Desdemona, for after his "hairbreadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach," he mentions his adventures among "antres vast and deserts idle, rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven."

I am not much concerned about the questions of practical usefulness asked in connection with this great adventure of the Himalayan climbers. It overrides all such questions. It is an act done in the high style, which honors humanity by offering it food for its inmost nature, which is compact of pure imagination and aspiration.

Mountain climbing is like the "Arabian Nights"—its subject is not science, and not trade, and not society, but something belonging to the transcendental world, which people can only understand when they are in a mood of detachment from ordinary ideas of practicality. It is the work of the spirit that discovered the earth's poles, reaching both within a period of but little over two years.

Yet the climbing of Mount Everest will have aplenty of practical results—in geography, in physics, in meteorology, in physiology and in many other ways. Perhaps men will fly over the immense mass of the Himalayan ranges and plateaus, the almost illimitable "abode of snow" before the century has entered its third decade.

Many persons have little idea of the enormous massiveness of these mountains, which in extent and elevation are symbolical of the unchallengeable supremacy of Asia among the continents. Look at a topographical chart of the world, where the Himalayas seem as though they must weigh down and crack the crust of the earth. Yet the modern doctrine of "isostacy," the "floating" of the continents and mountains on a denser zone of earth-stuff below, assures us that these huge ranges and towering peaks, together with the mighty foundations, are relatively light.

In the western world we have the longest mountain chain in existence, the Andes, and if the Rocky Mountains be considered as a northward extension of the Andean chain, the combined length is prodigious. Along its length, especially in South America, rise many very lofty peaks, of which Aconcagua (23,393 feet) is probably the highest. But that is more than a mile less than the height of Everest.

It is intructive and interesting to compare Everest with the highest North American peak Mount McKinley. For convenience, we may picture each mountain as a cone (which, of course, is not its real shape), giving it a base proportional to its height. The height of Everest is 1.45 times that of McKinley; their relative volume, measured as cones, is about as three to one. But there are two other Himalayan peaks each more than 28,000 feet high, and many exceeding 25,000.

JUST FIVE MIUTES MORE!
A Talk To Sufferers From Insomnia

After a restless night, during the long hours of which you have tossed and turned vainly longing for sleep, you sink just when day is breaking into a sort of torpor, which lulls and seems like slumber come at last. But this is not the sleep which recruits strength; it is simply mental and physical exhaustion, the giving-in of the nervous system for a while. And when the time to get up arrives, and you are called, the awakening comes as a shock. You feel wornout and quite unfit to rise to get ready for the labours of the day.

If you are frequently subject to such attacks of insomnia the reason is that your nerves have been overworked or your blood has become impoverished and thin, with the result that your entire system is run-down. In order that worse results may not follow the proper thing to do is to begin a course of tonic treatment, and for this purpose nothing could possibly be better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, these Pills containing everything necessary to build up the blood and nerves. Thus your forces will be renewed, your body's physical equilibrium will be re-established, calm health-and-strength giving sleep will return to you every night.

For sufferers from anaemia, neurasthenia, general weakness, the ill-effects of over-work, anxiety, mental or physical exhaustion, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a restorative of the utmost value. Medicine vendors everywhere sell them, or post free, $1.50 per bottle, $8 for 6 bottles, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Blood Poisoning
Yet Another Grand Recovery

Our Portrait is of Mr. WILLIAM HARBORNE, of 6, Railway Road, Perry Bar, Birmingham, England, who writes:

"About two years ago I met with rather a bad accident. My arm was cut severely, and I had to have it stitched at the hospital. This caused me six weeks' absence from work, and after resuming my duties for one week I broke out all over my body with huge Boils. Again I went to the Hospital, and was treated for Blood Poisoning; this happened on three successive occasions, until I began to think I should never be cured. Then I gave Clarke's Blood Mixture a trial, and the first bottle or two seemed to be driving out the poison, so I persevered, and after taking ten bottles I was cured. It is now over twelve months since I left off taking your Clarke's Blood Mixture, and I have seen no signs of any further blood disorder."

CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE, by reason of its remarkable blood purifying properties, can be relied upon to give speedy relief and lasting benefit in cases of Eczema, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Boils, Pimples, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout. Pleasant to take and free from anything injurious.

Good Taste In Dressing

ARE YOUR FIGURE MEASUREMENTS CORRECT?

It is an interesting fact that the reason why fashion drawings are so atractive is that generally these designs are made in a proportion that is different from the ordinary human measurements. Head length is the unit usually used, and the height of the average figure is eight heads. The fashion drawings are, as a rule, drawn from one to two heads longer, or taller, than the human figure.

Recently, in some investigation work, I ran across a chart that should prove of interest. It gave the correct measurements of the perfect figure.

As I already have said, the height of the figure from the top of the head to the floor should be eight heads. The distance from the tip of the chin to the bottom of the breast bone should be one head, while from the bottom of the breast bone to the waist line the length should be three-quarters of a head. The bust should be two inches smaller than the hip measurement.

The distance from the top of the forehead to the waist line should be just two heads. Now measure the length of your head. The width of your hips from side to side should be twice the number of inches of your head length. Their thickness should be one and one-sixth the total of your head, and the hips around should be four and one-half times that number of inches. Your waist line measurement should be three times your head length.

From the waist line to the beginning of the legs the measurement, if correct, is one head length, and from the beginning of the legs to the bottom of the knees the distance should be two and one-quarter heads. Two head lengths should form the distance from the bottom of the knee to the floor, making a total of five and one-quarter head lengths from the skirt belt or waist line to the floor.

This, then, is how we should be proportioned, the chart tells us. But, alack and aday, some of us find ourselves quite out of drawing! So it is that we are obliged to correct our shortcomings, or longcomings, as the case may be, to the best of our intelligence and ability.

For this reason I want to write a number of articles concerning the proper way to correct these wrong measurements, or if not actually to correct them, at least to tone them down so that they will pass more or less unnoticed.

The height of the figure should be eight heads

There are definite ways of concealing the defect of a waist that is too short, or of hips that are too broad. Even shoulders that are too broad can be helped to a considerable degree. And each of these points represents a fundamental interest in the matter of good dressing.

It is regrettably true that one woman's waist is far too short, so that she presents a dumpy appearance, while another may find that her large hips make it difficult to conform to the fashion of the hipless figure. Yet this is no reason why she should become discouraged and feel that her figure is hopeless. Proper corseting is a distinct help, of course; but intelligent dressing is just as vital. If you are not aware of your figure defects, or if you have not given them particular thought, compare your own measurements with the chart given above. Then let us set about softening those defects. I'll warrant it can be done!

Home Economics Department Plans Program For Year

The Home Economics Department of the American Women's Club met yesterday in the club rooms and formulated plans for the forthcoming year.

Following the reading of reports from the department officers the suggestion was made that the department combine its activities to some extent with other departments which have kindred interests. This suggestion met with unanimous approval and steps were taken to join with the Gardening department and the Music department in programs of interest to both. This dove-tailing of programs is especially desirable in view of the rather slack attendance which has prevailed during the past year at individual department meetings, due, undoubtedly, to the diffusion of club membership over so many different branches. The new plan will work out more advantageously for double attendance at any one meeting is thereby assured.

Mr. Julean Arnold, United States Commercial Attache at Peking, has consented to give a lecture during the course of the year at the club, under the auspices of the Home Economics Department. Mr. Arnold is noted for his fascinating talks on Chinese products and his lecture, it was announced tenatatively, probably will be in the soya bean.

Officers for next year in the department are as follows: Executive committee chairman, Mrs. J. M. Yard; vice-chairman, Mrs. N. F. Allman; recording secretary, Mrs. Challoner; publicity secretary, Mrs. W. W. Peter. Mrs. J. C. Clark and Mrs. Eugene Barnett will replace Mrs. F. J. Raven and Mrs. M. C. Guss on the executive committee.

Dotted Lines show where Rubber is cultivated

RUBBER PRODUCTS THAT ARE UNIFORMLY GOOD

A little over 15 years ago the United States Rubber Company started their own rubber plantations in Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. They did this that they might always be certain of securing crude rubber unvarying in quality.

Today the United States Rubber Company owns 172 square miles of rubber plantations and 5,000,000 carefully selected rubber trees under the constant care and supervision of a corps of tree experts.

Recently this company announced two revolutionary advances in the art of rubber manufacture: The New Sprayed Rubber and The New Web Cord.

The first of these ensures your getting rubber articles made from the purest virgin rubber ever produced. A rubber with all its natural properties unimpaired by the addition of smoke residues and chemicals. The second advance means a cord tire of a quality even more consistent than ever before.

United States Rubber products always have been leaders in the rubber industry. Now—due to these two startling discoveries, you can be assured of rubber products that are more than ever uniformly good.

American Ambassador At London Press Club

International Relations Affected By The Press

(By our own correspondent)

London, Mar. 24.—Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, the popular American Ambassador to London, is having a very busy time and apparently a very pleasant one, in responding to all the cordial invitations that are being showered upon him. The other day he was the principal guest at the monthly house dinner of the Press Club, when he was hailed not only as the Ambassador for the United States but as a veritable ambassador for humanity.

In responding to the toast Mr. Kellogg said he greatly appreciated the welcome he had received in Great Britain. The Press were generous and flattering and it was difficult to live up to the high standard he had been set. He had been for many years fairly intimate with the Press. As in America, he had found the members of the Press high-minded, able, and trustworthy. The American Press had freer access to public men than was the case over here. He thought the Press should have access to public men, and it was better for both the press and public men.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

There was not much more he could say, or need to say, on the relations between their two countries, but incidentally he would like to say something about the relation of the Press to international affairs. In foreign relations he was convinced that the Press had a greater influence even than in domestic, civic, and economic fields. In domestic issues the people of each country were in more intimate touch and better able to judge and weigh the value of the various phases presented by the Press and the opinions and policies advocated, but in international affairs, foreign countries, perhaps, were more apt to accept the opinions and news published by their domestic Press.

GRAFT THE EXCEPTION

One reading the Press comment of the last two months might arrive at the conclusion that public service in the United States was generally corrupt and permeated with graft; but such was not the case. Corruption was the rare exception and it was as it should be, ruthlessly exposed and prosecuted. One might also think from reading the Press that the entire United States and 12 miles out into the sea was "wet" and that more liquor was now consumed than before prohibition. The Press, very naturally, before prohibition did not publish the conditions brought about by the saloon, while since prohibition, most naturally, every violation of the law through rum-running made sensational news. As a matter of fact, the country was generally "dry" and violations of the law by the people were the exception. Nor did he believe it was generally understood that very much of the country had gone for prohibition on local option before they adopted the Constitutional Amendment.

COMMERCIAL RIVALRY

Both countries might, he thought, be congratulated that there were no serious differences now dividing them, but certain points of difference were bound to arise from time to time. They were competitors in commerce and transportation, in the dissemination of news, in manufacture, and in the advancement of the arts and sciences. Being competitors in the great world field, there were bound to be rivalries, jealousies, and conflicts of interest. When those differences arose the Press, of course, would print the news, but it should be its duty not unduly to inflame public opinion and stir up international antagonisms. If these differences pertained to purely domestic questions they must bear in mind that each nation was supreme within its own jurisdiction; if they pertained to treaties or principles of international law they could be settled by negotiation or by arbitration, unless the public mind was so inflamed as to influence unduly men in the Government. It was his observation that many times those questions which inflamed public opinion and divided nations were not vital issues.

CORDIAL GREETINGS

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald sent a message saying: "I am sorry that I shall not be able to be present in person when you are dining the American Ambassador. I am more and more impressed with the absolute necessity of creating the most cordial relations not merely of a negative but of a positive kind between the American nation and ourselves, and I believe I am right in stating that your distinguished guest shares my view. We have large possessions and much influence in this world, and it will be to the glory of both of us if we can use them to promote peace and happiness. Please give to his Excellency my warmest regards and best wishes for an enjoyable evening with you."

The President of the United States sent the following telegram: "Thanks for your letter and invitation. My best wishes to the London Press Club and all of its guests. Sincerest appreciation of your generous sentiments for the United States and your courtesy to Ambassador Kellogg. Increasing friendly and understanding relations among journalists of both countries unquestionably constitute one of the most potent assurances of world peace and rehabilitation —Calvin Coolidge."

Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Asquith also sent messages of goodwill and expressed the opinion that upon the Press of the two countries largely depends the good relations of the English speaking nations.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 11.—At yesterday's meeting of the Cabinet Dr. Wellington Koo and Admiral Wu Yu-lin pointed out the deplorable condition of the roads in Peking, which has recently been the subject of unfavorable comment by both foreigners and Chinese, and suggested that part of the proceeds of the new House Tax should be devoted to improvements of roads. This was agreed to by the other Members of the Cabinet, and it was decided that the matter should immediately be brought to the attention of the proper authorities.

Urges Mandate For Szechuen Governor

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 11.—General Liu Hsiang, Tupan of Rehabilitation in Szechuen, has sent a delegate to Peking to urge the promulgation of the appointments of Tuli and Civil Governor of Szechuan, which was passed some time ago by the Cabinet but never announced by mandate. General Liu Hsiang recommends that measures should be taken to suppress the followers of General Hsiung Keh-wu and General Tan Mou-hsin. He says that the followers of General Liu Chang-hsun, who were driven out of Chengtu and have since remained in the vicinity of the Provincial Capital, are willing to be enrolled with the Northern forces and he recommends that this should be done.

How To Cold Store Foods
The Ice-box should be used for storing all surplus food as well as unprepared foods which are subject to attack by insects or microbic life. This includes all dried fruits, chocolates and special prepared foods.
Drinking water should be placed, cool in large bottles on the floor of the Refrigerator. Butter, lard, cream and milk should be kept on the lower shelf, tender vegetables and fruits on upper shelf, meats and other foods on the intermediate shelves. There is method in this arrangement as different foods give off various gases and if you place Butter and creamery foods above meats and cooked foods you will have the Butter flavoured.
Remember to have your Refrigerator (Ice Box) thoroughly scrubbed out occasionally using hot water and common salt or simple antiseptic. Rinse with cold water and wipe dry.
Ice should then be left in the Refrigerator, door closed, and left for some time before placing food inside so that the air is properly cooled when the food is put in.
This fact is very important.
Above all be advised to use PURE 'CRYSTAL' ICE, which lasts longest and is very economical.

More Truth Than Poetry

worked many years against odds that were great,
Having always one purpose in view;
never was keen to be serving the state
And his tender impulses were few.
wanted a fortune, for money
he prized
As better than honors or brains;
s hopes and his longings were disguised,
And daily he counted his gains.

studied the market with sedulous care
And purchased when prices were low;
was daring whenever it paid him to dare,
Somehow he seemed always to know.
permitted no scruples to stand in his way
When a chance to make profits appeared;
bribed when he figured that bribing would pay,
There was nothing but loss that he feared.

became an employer and found it a joy
To be driving as hard as he could;
kept down the pay of each man and each boy,
For some reason thinking he should.
never stood waiting around when he saw
Any chance to be turning a trick;
hen he thought he might profit by breaking the law
His decision to break it was quick.

last, having millions, he bought an estate,
Holding thousands of acres in fee;
here Nature had finished a job that was great
He fenced off the land and the sea;
s castle was hidden and guards were on hand
To drive people far from the scene;
ere he died in six months, which was not as he'd planned—
Fate often is almighty mean!

To Keep Peace In The Pacific

"If the nations of the Pacific are to become the arbiters of the world's destiny, they are morally bound to see that good use is made of their power." This is the statement of Cyrus E. Woods, United States Ambassador to Japan, in an address made a few days ago before the Pan-Pacific Club in Tokio, says the Christian Science Monitor. It is undeniable that the center of human contact and, therefore, the center of possible human conflict, is swinging toward the Far East and the states that rim the Pacific. It is not so apparent that those states have set for themseives a course of international relationship that will serve to prevent the recurrent strife which has torn mankind during the Mediterranean and Atlantic eras of human history. And Mr. Woods raises the question whether it will "not be possible for the era of Pacific preponderance to justify its name, to be in truth pacific?"

There need to be more spokesmen in high places for this point of view. Material standards, too frequently, have been the measure of contacts between the East and the West—particularly between Japan and the United States. Railroads and phonographs pay-as-you-enter trams, steel mills and department stores—in an appreciation of these achievements there is something of a community of understanding between the peoples of the two countries. The strident clamor of this twentieth century machinery, however, has too often drowned out completely "the still small voice" of deeper things that awaits the understanding of a more deliberate moment.

"There is but one plea," said Mr. Woods, "I should like to make, and that is that Japan, in adopting the material attainments of the West, should go deeper than she sometimes appears to do, and strive to understand something of the spirit which underlies these attainments." If the Pacific era of history does usher in a period of more permanent peace, it will be based, with all our sharing of the materials of civilisation, upon this appreciation of the idealism which we believe underlies the material structure we have built.

It is, perhaps, in recognition of the need for this more fundamental understanding that religious leaders of Japan are called upon to mobilise the spiritual forces of the Nation for the task of Japanese reconstruction. It may be apparent, too, in the recent decree which permits Christian teachings in the public schools of Tokio.

Nor does the responsibility for discovering this ground of common understanding rest, altogether, with Japan. There seems to be little possibility but that the people of the United States and of Great Britain will go on, increasingly, to face, with the people of Japan, the problems of the Pacific. It rests with the English-speaking peoples to choose upon what basis they will rest that association. A desire for co-operation and good will seems, at the present moment to dominate American policy and to characterise American public opinion. To continue that policy will, in the future, demand concessions—on both sides of the Pacific. But if concessions can make of this new era one of peace rather than of conflict, there is no reason why they should not be made with confidence. For, it is altogether likely, as Mr. Woods declared, that "upon friendship and co-operation between the United States and Japan the future of mankind may well depend."

Want To Know About Condition Of U. S. Navy

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Washington, May 5.—Representatives Britten and Rogers have introduced a bill in the House asking for a full investigation of the Navy's condition.

The resolution follows a frank statement by Secretary Wilbur on the situation. He said the men were well up in target practice but that the ships are not all fit. Standards have risen since the war and the maneuvers last January showed the shortcomings in a telling manner.

The Secretary said that there was no friction in the navy and no one was trying to point out shortcomings because of grievance. No such mobilisation of navy forces ever took place in peace times before, he said, nor had such voluminous reports been produced.

The maneuvers, he said, were conducted on a business as well as a scientific basis to learn just what kind of a machine the navy had. He declared himself highly pleased at the performance of the men and he said that in target work some unprecedented records were made.

BANKS HERE IN MOVE TO STANDARDIZE TERMINOLOGY

Association Glossary Is Observed By 24 Members

PROVES BIG HELP

Greater Efficiency Results From Uniformity

Inspired by the example of expertly managed foreign banks, Chinese bankers have begun a serious effort to improve and standardise their banking methods. Under the leadership of the Shanghai Bankers' Association, this port has become the center of banking reforms. Several important reforms have been fathered by the association and other improvements will be initiated after the organisation moves into its new headquarters in Hongkong Road, which will be completed during the coming summer.

The first modern accounting system used by Chinese banks was introduced from Japan. Along with this innovation, various Japanese banking terms were imported. Then the influence of British and American banking methods became felt with the introduction of terms from these countries. The Chinese themselves invented various terms to meet the needs of the situation. The result was more or less confusion in native financial terminology.

Several years ago the Shanghai Bankers' Association appointed a committee to formulate a glossary of financial words. The group of experts was composed of the following: K. M. Yang, T. H. Yao, K. K. Wong, T. D. Hsia, C. Y. Chuang, C. P. Sih, C. P. Yao, C. C. Chu, S. S. M. Tang, T. T. Li, L. S. Bei, Y. F. Hoe, K. D. Tsiang, M. K. Hu, T. J. Cheng, C. L. Chow and C. C. Hsu. These men are well-known in Chinese banking circles and represented more than half a dozen prominent financial institution.

STANDARDISE TERMS

After more than two years of investigation and study, the committee recommended a list of some sixty terms with the suggestion that they be used throughout all of China. The glossary is now in use by the twenty-four members of the association and by various other local Chinese banks. The prestige of Shanghai as a commercial and financial center is causing these terms to come into use in other parts of China. The general effect of the work accomplished by the association has been to simplify banking terminology in Central China. These are the terms which have been given standardised Chinese characters:

ASSETS

Balance brought forward from profit and loss account, bank notes, bank orders outstanding, bills discounted, bills purchased, bills received for collection, bills sent for collection, bullion transactions.

Call loans (secured), capital, cash, certified cheques, charges for safe custody, classification of accounts, commission, current accounts overdrawn, current deposits.

Deposits at call, depreciation on land, buildings, furniture and fixtures; dividend payable, documentary bills, drafts issued and telegraphic transfers, drafts payable.

Exchange.

Fixed deposits, fixed loans (secured), fixed loans (unsecured), funiture and fixtures.

Head office and branches.

Interest, interest suspense, investments.

Land and buildings, letter of credit, liabilities, loans at short notice, loans from others.

Management and general expenses, miscellaneous.

Other banks, overdue bills.

Preliminary expenses written off, profit and loss account, profit and loss account for the previous period, profit and loss on bullion transaction, profit and loss on exchange profit and loss on investments.

Reserve, reserve for bank notes issued, reserve for staff guarantee fund or provident fund.

Savings deposits, staff bonus payable, staff guarantee fund or provident fund, staff pension fund, sundry collections, sundry debtors.

Transfer charges, trust deposits.

Unpaid capital.

Upon request, the association issues a circular of the above terms with the Chinese equivalents. The adoption of this glossary is giving greater efficiency to banking transactions, and both Chinese and foreign banks have been urged to adopt it.

TO UNIFY EFFORTS

The Shanghai glossary apparently will be the nucleus of a larger set of standardised terms which will be adopted in the course of time. Chinese bankers' associations in Peking, Hankow and other centers are working along similar lines, and all of these efforts are to be united.

The Shanghai Bankers' Association is occupying temporary quarters in the building of the Bank of Communications. The association's new building in Hongkong Road is a re-inforced structure of six storeys. The association's quarters, which will include offices, an assembly room and a clearing-house room, will occupy the ground floor. Club rooms and staff quarters will be located on the top floor. The remaining space will be let for offices. The building was designed by the Southeastern Architectural and Engineering Co. and the building contractor is Tsao Singtai. The cost will be Shanghai Tls. 155,000.

Japan Business Magnate Fearful Of The Country's Future Economic Outlook

Director Of Leading Bank Attributes Monetary Ills To Flippancy And Growing Love Of Luxury

Financiers in Japan seem to be swayed with uncertainty in regard to the country's financial prospects, some of them being extremely pessimistic as regards the future.

Talking to one of the directors of the largest banking institutions of Tokio, a representative of the Japan Advertiser was told that the future of Japan, from an economic point of view, was shrouded in gloom and that this situation will continue to prevail for some time to come. This is a type of extreme pessimism, but weight is lent the fact that he is connected with one of the most important financial institutions in the capital, and, for that matter, in the Empire.

"In spite of reconstruction needs," the Japan Advertiser representative was told, "there is absolutely no sign of the money rate—both for short and long term loans—relaxing. There is nothing unreasonable or abnormal in this when it is borne in mind that there is a tremendus demand for funds, no matter how high the rate of interest may be, and bankers, generally speaking, are today reluctant to grant new loans and are, at the same time, anxious to withdraw those already made.

"Deposits are steadily ebbing, an indication that people are spending more than they are earning. When trade is prosperous and industries are making profits, bankers are only too ready to accommodate them with funds, which, transferred to deposit accounts, result in the swelling of the total amount of deposits in the country, while at present traders and industrialists are compelled to draw on their deposits to meet the requests of bankers to pay back the money advanced them. Everybody today is losing; nobody is making enough profit to be able to save."

THE RECENT FOREIGN LOANS

Dealing with the loans that have negotiated in foreign countries to aid reconstruction in Japan, he declared that the loan will not have any positive influence on the home money market so long as the funds raised are kept outside of the country. "Much speculation as to the possible effects of this international financial transaction," he said, "has been indulged in. It will exercise some effect on the domestic money market only if the funds, or part thereof, are spent and distributed through proper channels at home. If information so far available is to be banked on, the Government does not entertain the slightest intention of using the funds, wholly or partially, for domestic purposes, so that the loans will not go further than preventing the tension from growing tighter, as the result of the outflow of liquid funds to settle the adverse balance of trade. If, however, anyone has entertained the opinion that the successful flotation of the loans solved Japan's financial problems for good and all, then he is sadly mistaken. The loans are merely a makeshift expedient like an injection of morphia administered to a patient to make him temporarily forget his pain. If any fundamental solution is to come, it must come solely through the efforts of the people themselves."

SAYS NATION IS LAZY

The director of the bank then launched a bitter attack on the present generation whom he characterised as a "spoilt race," pervaded by a "morbidly lazy spirit," and that nothing worth while can be expected of it.

"We cannot, however, expect from the present generation much in the way of a fundamental solution, for they are a spoiled race. They cannot forget the habit of luxury which the war prosperity put them in a position to contract. They can no more get rid of this baneful habit than an opiomaniac can throw away his fatal pipe. No amount of preaching will avail, for they have lost for good and ever all thought of honest and steady effort. Instead of saving by hard toil and arduous work, they think and dream of getting easy money and a big sum in one stroke. The whole nation from top to bottom is pervaded by such a morbidly lazy spirit, and as far as we see it there is no hope of an effective cure. The present Cabinet talks much about the proper guidance of national thought which, is as it were, rolling down-hill with an accelerated velocity. In professing such a policy, they are undoubtedly honest but alas, they are all of them, most of all the aged Premier, ignorant of the practicabilities of life. They are living in an age of their own, and cannot sympathise with the aspirations of the rising generation. They cannot appreciate the real need of the community, and are driving things from bad to worse in the attempt to make it better. For instance, they have done everything that a fertile mind can conceive to encourage "dangerous thoughts," to instigate class hatred, to widen the chasm between the employer and the employed, between the governing class and the governed. They do not even notice their own errors and are self-complacent enough to ascribe the present unsettled state of the popular mind to the handiwork of ambitious propagandists, and, by way of meting out what they think an effective cure, they are contemplating reorganisation of the Shrines Bureaus of the Home Department. The whole thing is absurd beyond criticism. They might as well boil a kettle over an oil stove in order to invite rain by evaporation. The average human being is an intelligent being, and yet under the force of circumstances it is possible for their judgment to suffer to this extent.

FEARS FURTHER LOANS

"I have made a departure from the subject I had originally meant to discuss. To come back, Japanese people are now spending without earning. But the time will come when they can no more buy, and that will be the moment when they will wake up, but never till then. In trade and industries let them continue to indulge in their hand-to-mouth habits, Imports will go on increasing while exports will further suffer on account of the bad reputation of Japanese commodities, the anti-Japanese sentiment in the export markets, the growth of competitive industries and various other reasons. To meet the adverse trade balance it will be necessary to float a second and a third loan on the foreign markets, but that sort of business cannot go on indefinitely. One day they will meet with a refusal and be called to account. The Japanese people will wake up only then.

"Then the question will crop up, if it is not possible to find some remedy, some prevenuve to save Japan in time before she will have spent herself. I think we had better inculcate in the mind of the young generation a firmer and a more steady spirit by dint of education from the primary to the middle school. These are free from the contamination of the baneful war effects. They are raw materials susceptible of being shaped into whatever form is deemed fit to maintain their place in the struggle for existence. But here is one danger besetting the path which threatens to render all these efforts fruitless. It is the growing difficulty for young educated men to make a living. We wanted 10 freshmen from the Imperial University this year and we have got 300 odd applicants. Such a phenomenon is appalling. The task of selecting 10 men out of 300 odd applicants can never be just and strictly impartial. These men can not hope to get their living by means of manual labor. Brain work, that is the only thing they are capable of, but if they cannot find their chance with the Government service or some business firms, a good portion will take to the profession of pen by means of which they will voice their discontent with the existing order of society. They might advocate 'Direct Action' of which the conservatives are so nervous, but which is finding more and more supporters among the young radicalists and laborers. This, I think is where the true danger lies. It devolves upon the statesmen to govern the nation with this possibility in view, keep order in the country till the diseased elements in the community pass away and are replaced by the sound elements which will come out I don't know how many years afterward."

TAXES IMPOSED ON AMERICAN TIMBER COMPEL CUTTING

Revision Of Laws Termed Necessary As Measure Of Conservation

Speaking recently at the meeting of the North Carolina Forestry Association, Mr. T. Abberly, of the Pine Lumber Company, cited a case in his own experience as an illuminating exposition of how it happens that the practical lumberman is apt to seem utterly ruthless in the way in which he sweeps the land clean of all its trees, apparently with absolute disregard of whether it ever grows another tree or not.

Mr. Abberly told of a 20,000 acre tract now held by his company, which was bought fifteen years ago at a cost of $4 per thousand feet of standing timber. In taxes and interest on it alone, this timber now represents an investment of $10 per thousand feet and if the carrying charges are added its cost on the books is $19, he stated. In the fifteen years of ownership the amount of taxes assessed per thousand acres has increased from $100 to $1,000 per acre.

"In these circumstances it is clear that while there has been a great increase in the value of the timber, it has represented nothing appreciable to its owner except the pleasure of proving the point that instead of profiting he is losing by its growth," says the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey in a statement discussing the economic in equalities of timber taxation. "In this instance the States has progressively absorbed all the enhanced value the private owner made possible.

"What has happened is that under the system of taxation in vogue in the State, the owner of timber not only must cut it as quickly as possible in order to get a turn-over of his investment, while there is a chance of profit, but is prevented from attempting to grow new timber on the land that he has denuded. As a result thousands upon thousands of acres of timber land are prematurely lumbered at a great sacrifice, and when once cut are practically abandoned.

"Taxes in any event being based upon values, all this loss in the sacrifice of timber at a time when it has not attained its best growth, and all this casting aside as waste land of acreages that should be kept continually growing forests fall directly upon the State, not only in the loss of the resources which the forests would create for the people and the industries they would stimulate and sustain, but of revenue which ultimately would have flowed into the State treasury.

There is much to be done by State and national agencies to establish the principles of forest conservation, both as a means of regulation of rainfall and stream flow for the benefit of rivers, and as the only hope of averting a positive lumber crisis whose effect upon general prosperity and happiness would be incalculable. But anything like Government ownership of timber lands being as impossible of consideration as a denial of private ownership of any land at all, it remains true that if timber is to be provided and the forests saved, it must be accomplished through the owners of private timber lands or of lands capable of growing timber in the future. It follows, therefore, that the solution is that of making the care of timber lands, the growth of timber and reforestation after cutting practical as a policy to the practical man.

"Under a system whereby growing timber is progressively assessed for taxation at its value as it stands, any such policy on the part of a private owner is impossible except for purposes of demonstration. Timber grows surely but slowly. To let it mature means a long wait through a term of years while the investment increases with accumulated interest charges and risk, the addition of constantly advancing tax rate literally forces the cutting for market and the subsequent abandonment of the cut-over land which constitute one of the most glaring examples of America's waste of the greatest of what once appeared illimitable resources.

"At the meeting of the North Carolian Forestry Association reform in the method of taxation of timber lands was recognised as fundamental to anything like a successful movement to conserve timber resources. In the discussion it was agreed that while the State was entitled to receive taxes upon the value of all timber as a factor entering into the assessment of the land on which it stands, the greater part of these taxes should be collected at the time the timber is severed, instead of being imposed year by year in the period during which the timber is growing.

"Some method of taxing timber lands must be devised which will relieve the owner of the ruinous burden of too heavy carrying charges, or else ordinary business caution will force him to cut his tax charges by cutting his timber; and since taxes will prevent him from growing timber again, there will ultimately, and sooner than is generally appreciated, be no more timber to cut."

Resolutions were adopted by the association calling for a thorough study of forest taxation by a special committee in cooperation with the State Geological and Economic Survey and the United States Forest Service; for a revision of the laws governing timber taxation so as to shift a part of the burden from growing to cut timber, and for a study of Federal taxation affecting forests and lumbermen.

Something To Think About

By Bruno Lessing

RELIGION AND CIVILISATION

Here's a line from Brisbane's "Today" column worth more space than he gives to it:

"The calming down of our religious emotions is a most important forward step in civilisation."

In that line you find a thought that is worthy of a whole newspaper page, a whole book, a whole library. It is a thought which, if you could ever stuff it into the heads of one-half of the population of the United States, would do tremendous good.

We have altogether too much religious emotion in this country today. It is doing tremendous harm. The amount of harm that it is doing will not be realised until the day of reckoning comes.

We have churches meddling with politics. We have preachers talking about economic questions which they do not understand. We have religious movements that try to interfere with the popular tendency.

These are all manifestations of religious emotion. They interfere with the struggle of 115,000,000 people to establish a sane form of government. They inject hysteria and prejudice into problems which require only common sense for their solution.

Religion is a purely personal matter between the individual and God. It begins there and it ends there. If you want to be fanatical about it and are eager to impose your religious belief upon your neighbor, why, the Constitution of the United States is even broad enough to give you the opportunity to talk to him, to argue with him, to coax him, to plead with him and to pray for him.

But, OUTSIDE OF THAT, LEAVE YOUR NEIGHBOR ALONE!

Don't get emotional about it. Above all, do not try to inflict your personal religion upon a nation.

It has been tried before, many times. The conflict between religion and systems of government is as old as the hills. Religion loses every battle.

If you have a sincere belief in your religion, and if you honestly practice what you believe, you are not only a valuable citizen but you are doing tremendously good work in uplifting the standard of conduct of your fellow citizens.

If you try to make your fellowman follow your belief, if you try to influence the legislative power of your country to inflict your religious belief upon others, or if you fail, in the slightest degree, in according respect to those who believe differently from you, you are not only emotional in your religion but you become a dangerous pest to your country.

Our Water Supply

THE second of the cases against the captains of President boats for the alleged discharge of oil into the waters of the harbor came to a conclusion late yesterday afternoon, the defendant being dismissed. We have no quarrel whatever to find with the decision of the Court, in fact, if we may say so, we are in accord with the judgment, for in it we see applied those principles as the result of which it is required that very definite proof is necessary to convict an accused. In this case the Court held that the evidence for the prosecution did not close the avenues of all reasonable doubt and of this the defendant was entitled to receive the benefit.

But the seriousness of the matter cannot be gainsaid for one moment. We have in Shanghai some half a million people dependent upon a water supply drawn from the Whangpoo. There was evidence given yesterday morning as to the effect the incursion of oil might have on our water supply, and it was suggested that for weeks, or even months, while the necessary cleansing operations were in progress, it might be impossible for the Waterworks Company to maintain a supply of usual quantity and quality. Indeed, in a letter to the Harbor Master—a letter which was read in Court—this point was particularly emphasised, while Captain Eisler spoke of the danger of having the filter beds so clogged that the filtering medium would have to be removed.

We are not disposed to believe that any one oil burning ship is guiltier in this matter than another, and we fancy it would be possible to discharge oil into the harbor at night when detection would be a matter of practical impossibility. In that event, it is just possible that some other unfortunate ship's captain would be blamed for the misdeed of which he might be totally innocent. In such circumstances, it would be possible for the best laid prosecution to misfire, short of having divers attached to a ship's bottom while in and leaving port to see that no oil was discharged, and to obtain effective evidence if such transgression occurred. It speaks well for the Customs authorities that they decided to bring the matter before the consular authorities of the nationals involved rather than avail themselves of the powers invested in them by the regulations applicable to this port. Possibly, had they inflicted their own punishment, an injustice might have been done. In any event, the penalty they might choose would be a severe one, for if they stopped the working and clearance of an offending ship for even one day, it might involve a pecuniary loss much greater than that covered by any fine which might be imposed. In the case of the President McKinley, it was stated that such a punishment might involve the ship in a loss of Gold $1,000 per diem.

From the evidence yesterday it was proved that, wherever it came from, oil was on the water that day. The Court did not consider the President McKinley at fault, but that does not remove ground for belief that someone else was responsible. Whoever was the guilty person, he was responsible for endangering the water supply of a city of half a million souls, and in a place like this, where our water supply is of paramount importance, the continuance of such offences against the community is absolutely intolerable. Total, or even partial disorganisation of our water system, especially during the summer months, might be fraught with so much danger, that we have no hesitation in recommending that the Customs authorities see their way clear to impressing future offenders with the fact that they will not be allowed to do this thing with impunity.

As we have stated, the Harbor Regulations place sufficient power in the hands of the Customs authorities to deal with the matter along the most stringent lines. Sufficient publicity has been given to the fact that the discharge of oil into the harbor is unlawful, we know it is dangerous to the community, and the recent prosecutions, unsuccessful though they might have been, should have been sufficient to impress upon those responsible that the practice is one which ought to be stopped. Possibly recent action may have that effect, but if it does not, we consider that there is a moral obligation upon the Customs authorities to take such steps as will make an example of some future offender in this respect. We have yet to learn that the discharge of oily matter, whether it be from the bilge tanks, or from oil containers, cannot be done as conveniently on the high seas as within the narrow confines of this harbor, and for any future offence we would like to see the Customs authorities inflict the punishment which they have in their power to impose.

Humorous Side Of Journalism

A GOOD story is related of an American "cub" reporter who was assigned to "cover" an earthquake or some such amiable event. Being imbued with a sense of solemnity after having been over the scene of devastation, the enthusiastic and impressionable chronicler of current history despatched a cable to his editor: "God tonight walks abroad in the land," or words to that effect—we are quoting from memory. Promptly came the editor's laconic reply: "Interview God," by which one is to infer that out in the States the autocratic editor is not disposed to accept any excuses if an assignment is not executed.

Here in the Far East conditions, of course, are different, and a wide latitude is allowed in the journalistic field as in almost everything else. The average man or woman in this part of the world has not the haziest idea of the conditions in which a newspaper is produced. Not long ago, a lady, in the course of a dinner party, turned round to an editor who was a member of the gathering and expressed profound astonishment that editors could always find subjects to write about. That is a little secret which most editors are inclined jealously to safeguard in order the more to impress those who are daily regaled with intellectual pabulum. The editorial columns, as a rule, represent the more serious side of a newspaper by reason of the comment, weighty or otherwise, on current world politics. But there is another side to journalism—and that is the humorous side.

The humorous side of newspaper work was touched on the other day by Mr. Cowen, editor of the "North China Daily Mail," in the course of a racy address delivered before the Rotary Club in Tientsin. Newspapers in the Far East do not, as a rule, pay overmuch attention to their contemporaries in the way of handing out delicate compliments, but Mr. Cowen has been in journalism for almost forty years, and during his wide experience has seen most sides of "the game"—all except the mechanical department—and the impressions gathered during that period of time may not be altogether profitless. It was ignorance of the mechanical branch of a newspaper office which nearly led to Mr. Cowen's undoing when he started the first newspaper printed in Peking. The difficulties could be imagined when there was practically no type, no ink, no paper and no machinery. Compositors were obtained from the American Methodist Mission and a machine was purchased from home. It came out without any directions whatever as to assemble it, and the only instructions that the hapless editor could vouchsafe to the Chinese was "Get it together," whereupon the puzzled natives queried: "What thing?" Well, it took them a month to do it, but it was done. And when it is realised what even a small printing machine is, it will be readily agreed that those Chinese did well. Up to half an hour before the time the paper was supposed to be first published, the editor did not know whether the machine would be able to print the issue.

Mr. Cowen also enjoys the distinction of having started the first daily newspaper in North China, a venture which was criticised at the time on the ground that there was not sufficient news to warrant it. "But that is the easiest part of a newspaper," commented the scribe drily. "As I told the then editor of the Peking and Tientsin Times, news is easy to get. If you can't find it, then you make it, and if you can't make it, then you steal it." That seems to sum up the philosophy of more than one paper in this part of the world, as we can sorrowfully testify to the fact that news items are freely "lifted" from this paper from time to time by some outport contemporaries without the slightest acknowledgment of their original source.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Cowen, who enlivened his talk with a number of entertaining stories of newspaper errors, first came to China as the result of an erroneous newspaper report. He came out as the correspondent of the London Times during the Boxer conflict, when it was believed that the paper's correspondent, Mr. Morrison, had been killed. "I had the pleasure of handing him a copy of the Times in which was an account of his death," says Mr. Cowen. The account, as in the case of the late Mark Twain, was happily rather exaggerated.

Shanghai has a strong Scottish element in the foreign community, and even though it be at their expense, we feel sure they will take with good grace the manner in which Mr. Cowen scores a delightful hit at the Scots. When criticised for singing a Scottish song, he confessed: "I am not Scottish, but I can claim lineal descent from Robert Bruce's spider" (Mr. Cowen's Rotary Club name is Spider). "I know that Bruce's spider was English, because it is the bipeds who come down south from Scotland, and the insects who go north." We know the good Scots of Shanghai will not take this merry jest amiss, as they share with the Jews that saving sense of humor which renders it possible for them to appreciate, and even laugh at, a joke against themselves.

The Filipino Point Of View

(The author of the following article is a product of American schools in the Philippines. He graduated from the Ho-Ho High School and later studied for four years in an American university. His viewpoint, as representing that of the younger generation of Filipinos, is particularly interesting at this time.)

BY P. V. CONFESOR

There are several aspects of the Philippine independence movement that distinguish it from independence movements abroad. In the first place, there is about it nothing that can be called seditious. The loyalty of the Filipino people to the Stars and Stripes has on many occasions been tried and found genuine. Even now, when we are passing through one of the most trying crises in the history of our country, we are just as firm as ever in our allegiance to the United States.

Another aspect of the independence movement, peculiar to itself, lies in the fact that the moving forces and factors in it are not so much the politicians as that body of young Filipinos who were the first to receive the benefits of the American system of education in the Islands. These young men, including myself, have, since the beginning, been taught the fundamental maxims of government that have grown and flourished on the American soil.

In my case, for instance, over the first school I attended floated the Starts and Stripes; the first song in English I sang in school was "America;" the first important political document I read and learned was the Declaration of Independence; and the first piece of literature I was asked to commit to memory was Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Those others also who were born within the last twenty-five years or so have been similarly blessed. They have also been taught that Old Glory belongs to the "land of liberty;" that "governments are instituted, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed;" and that there is such a thing as "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

How their education has affected them in their attitude toward the independence question, the rising generation of Filipinos have already on many occasions shown. It was, therefore, with genuine pride and satisfaction that I watched the active participation of young Filipino college students in various universities and colleges in and around Manila during the last special election which was held to choose a fit person to fill a vacancy in the Philippine Senate. With all the vigor and determination of youth, these college boys threw their influence on, and tirelessly worked for, no other party but that which advocated the immediate and complete independence of the Islands. It was, to a considerable degree, due to them that the party they had espoused carried the day. My older brother, who was elected to the Philippine House of Representatives in 1922, wrote to me immediately after his election, saying, "The young men of our district worked for my candidacy as they have never worked before, and it is due to their efforts mainly that I was able to amass a decided margin of votes over my opponent."

The third aspect of the Philippine independence movement is found in the fact that it is not intended, as many people think it is, against the strain and stress which that civilisation has forced upon us Filipinos. Neither does it propound a new set of half-baked or untried doctrines and theories. But we who are in that movement are simply reminding the United States that the freedom we are asking for seems to us to be no-

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

SCIENCE AND ART

Science—the only lever capable of raising mankind. Abject faith is barbarism; reason is civilisation. To obey is slavish; to act from a sense of obligation, perceived by reason, is noble. Ignorance worships mystery; reason explains it; the one grovels, the other soars.

The glory of science is, that it is freeing the soul, breaking the mental manacles, getting the brain out of bondage, giving courage to thought, filling the world with mercy, justice, and joy.

Science took a handful of sand, constructed a telescope, and with it explored the starry depths of heaven. Science wrested from the gods their thunderbolts; and now, the electric spark, freighted with thought and love, flashes under all the waves of the sea, and through the air. Science took a tear from the cheek of unpaid labor, converted it into steam, created a giant that turns with tireless arm the countless wheels of toil.

At one time it was thought that scenery, the grand in nature, made the poet. We now know that the poet makes the scenery. The place where man has died for man is grander than all the snow-crowned summits of the world.

Thought is a form of force. We walk with the same force with which we think. Man is an organism, that changes several forms of force into thought-force. Man is a machine into which we put what we call food and produce what we call thought. Think of that wonderful chemistry by which bread was changed into the divine tragedy of Hamlet!

Language is not subtle enough, tender enough, to express all we feel; and when language fails, the highest and deepest longings are translated into music. Music is the sunshine—the climate—of the soul, and it floods the heart with a perfect June.

Music expresses feeling and thought, without language. It was below and before speech, and it is above and beyond all words. Beneath the waves is the sea—above the clouds the sky.

The greatest music is the most marvelous mingling of Love and Death. Love is the greatest of all passions and Death is its shadow. Death gets all its terror from Love, and Love get its intensity, is radiance, its glory and its rapture, from the darkness of Death.

Great music is always sad, because it tells us of the perfect; and such is the difference between what we are and that which the music suggests, that even in the vase of joy we find some tears.

Everything except the demonstrated truth is liable to die. That is the order of Nature. Words die. Every language has a cemetery. Every now and then a word dies and a tombstone is erected, and across it is written "obsolete." New words are continually being born. There is a cradle in which a word is rocked. A thought is married to a sound and a child-word is born. And there comes a time when the word gets old, and wrinkled, and expressionless, and is carried mournfully to the grave.

Humor is one of the most valuable things in the human brain. It is the torch of the mind—it sheds light. Humor is the readiest test of truth—of the natural, of the sensible—and when you take from a man all sense of humor, there will only be enough left to make a bigot.

It may be that humor is the pilot of reason. People without humor drift unconsciously into absurdity. Humor sees the other side—stands in the mind like a spectator, a good-natured critic, and gives its opinion before judgment is reached. Humor goes with good nature, and good nature is the climate of reason. In anger, reason abdicates and malice extinguishes the torch.

The great poet is as unconscious as Nature, and the product of the highest art seems to have been felt instead of thought.

The great poet is intensely human, infinitely sympathetic, entering into the joys and griefs of others, bearing their burdens, knowing their sorrows. Brain without heart is not much; they must act together.

Beauty is not all there is of poetry. It must contain the truth. It is not simply an oak, rude and grand, neither is it simply a vine. It is both. Around the oak of truth runs the vine of beauty.

Poetry cannot be written by rule; it is not a trade, or a profession. Let the critics lay down the laws, and the true poet will violate them all.

A poet is something like a mountain stream that flashes in light, then lost in shadow, leaps with a kind of wild joy into the abyss, emerges victorious, and winding runs amid meadows, lingers in quiet places, holding within its breast the hills and vales and clouds—then running by the cottage door, babbling of joy and murmuring delight, then sweeping on to join its old mother, the sea.

THE PICTURE EXHIBITION

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir,—May I be allowed, through your valuable columns, to call attention to the real educational value of the exhibition of pictures and sculptures which is now on view at 17, The Bund. As has been pointed out in the press, the art of painting has hitherto been somewhat neglected in Shanghai and it has been due to individual effort and not to any corporate action that small exhibitions have taken place in the past. Now that the China Society of Science and Arts, with a strong backing from the art sections of the American Woman's Club and British Women's Association, has carried out its plan of inaugurating fine art exhibitions at stated periods, it is greatly to be hoped that the public will do their share in supporting them. The primary object of the enterprise is, I think, educational and the secondary the encouragement of those who dare to tread the uphill path of painting.

To many of us it seems a really serious lack in the education of children who are born and brought up in the Far East that they practically never, from one year's and to another, come in contact with the elevating, refining and inspiring influences of good pictures. It is not contended for a moment that the artistic level of the present exhibition is on a very high plane or that some of the pictures shown are not almost primitive, both in conception and technique. There is, on the other hand, however, quite a good proportion of works of considerable artistic achievement, and three, at least, of the well-known Western schools of art are worthily represented by the paintings of past students. Most important of all, there are a number of pictures which will help to train the unobservant eye in what to look for in nature and which will encourage the less imaginative to seek beauty, interest and character among the intensely picturesque episodes of everyday life in China.

We are far too much inclined, in my opinion, to think of "art" as a close borough, whereas observation and appreciation, both of color and form, may be the heritage of everyone who has eyes to see, if they will only make it a matter of cultivation and habit. The value of the suggestion of a reasonably good drawing, painting or sculpture to the mind of a child can hardly be exaggerated, and some of the keenest and purest pleasure in life is probably derived from having been encouraged to look at good pictures, thereby being enabled to appreciate beauty and character in nature, during the impressionable years. It is with something of this nature in view that all children in Shanghai have been cordially invited to come and look (without entrance fee) at the pictures in the present exhibition, which remains open until 7 o'clock this evening.

In order to avoid any misunderstanding, it may as well be stated here that the aim of those responsible for the exhibition is neither profit, advertisement nor even charity, (artists have been charged merely $1 for registration and 10 percent on works sold, while the public, with the exception of children, who are admitted free, pay 50 cents for admission) but merely a very genuine desire to do something to raise the standard of education for the nonce above the necessarily somewhat material lines on which it is usually carried out.

I am, etc.,
Beatrix Manico Gull.

The Use Of Philosophy

Do you remember how Seneca begins his essay on "The Happy Life?" It is well worth remembering, and runs thus:

"There is not anything in this world perhaps, that is more talked of and less understood than the business of a happy life."

The requisites to a happy hereafter have been pretty well worked out by the theologians; but who tells us how to maintain a succession of happy nows? Our foolish heads are full of plans for tomorrow's joy, but there is no plan about today's, and when it comes we usually look upon it as stolen or fear it as an omen of trouble to come.

Prosperity does not necessarily bring happiness. We think it does, because we are all chasing with that end in view. When the hoped for joy does not come we are disappointed. Hence, as we grow old we become bitter. Old age is dreadful only because it is loaded with broken illusions. We believe all our lives things that are not true; in old age, if not before, we find this out.

The truth is that happiness is a habit, or rather an art, and must be practised every day. It consists in the appreciation of what we have, not in the anticipation of what we expect to get.

Some sort of philosophy is essential. To be a philosopher does not imply that you must have taken a unversity course and have studied a number of thick books, nor that you should be gifted in reasoning. Some of the best philosophers in the world are blacksmiths, bricklayers, housewives and brakemen.

Philosophy means seeing things in a right proportion. It means a shifty accommodating of one's self to the inevitable. It means knowing how to adjust one's self dexterously to failure. It means what is called on the street "being a good sport," which is to say, accepting reverses and looking pleasant.

People may laugh at you when you talk of taking things philosophically. They will quote you, "There was never yet philosopher could bear the toothache patiently," and tell you to wait until trouble comes to you and see how you will stand it.

But, for all that, no one is fortified in happiness except by philosophy. All the various cults, sects, fads and religions are valuable for present contentment in proportion to the philosophy they contain.

Essential and continuous happiness does not flow from prosperity nor from any events, but from the discipline which commonsense exercises over our thoughts and feelings. That is philosophy.

thing less and nothing more than that freedom which the patriots of 1776 succeeded in wresting from England and handing down to the generations that followed them.

Our claim for freedom on the basis of the Declaration of Independence would be of less weight if the inhabitants of the Islands were few and incapable of occupying territory really needed by others; but this is far from the case. The fact is that the Philippines are densely populated, and the Americans least of all need what room there is. I am well aware that this doctrine has lately come to be construed by ill-intentioned reasoning, as well as by honest ignorance, in the sense that the fathers of the Republic proclaimed by it to the civilised world the astounding and essentially anarchistic doctrine that civilised states are inhibited from imposing upon less politically elevated people government without their own consent, albeit to rescue civilisation from anarchy and disorder. But, I earnestly submit to the candid judgment of the American public opinion that, if such a priori assertion were true, then the Declaration of Independence would deserve the reprobation of all decent men, as being the gospel of anarchy, instead of being, as it was, is, and ought to be, a plain statement of the rights of men living in organised political society.

We invoke and advocate the theory of government by the "consent of the governed," because of the inalienable righteousness and historical validity of which we of the younger generation of Filipinos have been taught since our early school-days. It was an American teacher who asked me to study American history; and as a result of my study I came to know how a great American statesman, Henry Clay, once said of a class of men who would repress all tendencies to liberty and emancipation, that they must, if they would do this, go back to the era of the American independence, and muzzle the cannons which thundered their annual joyous return; that they must blow the moral lights around them; they must penetrate the human soul, and eradicate there the love of liberty; and that then, and only till then, could they prolong dominion over unconsenting subjects.

In order to reinforce our claim for freedom, we also invoke and advocate another great American statesman. The doctrine of "government of the people, by the people, and for the people" is not a mere play of words. It is embedded in the very life-springs of the American constitutional vitality; it has become the very essence of American government. And it is, even if not constitutionally, at least practically, impossible for the American people to maintain in the Philippines any government, except it be a government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

This last aspect of the Philippine independence movement is easily its most important characteristic. As just pointed out, in the advocacy of our cause, we Filipinos are not invoking doctrines that are foreign or shocking to American ideas of government. On the contrary, what we are advocating are doctrines that are emphatically and peculiarly American in concept, American tradition, and justified by American constitutional and political history. Just as, during the American Revolution, the colonists fought for English constitutional rights and liberties, so now in our desire to be free, we Filipinos invoke, to make our claim for freedom valid, American maxims of democracy and constitutional government. Especially are we of the rising generation of Filipinos who have been taught about all these ideas, very eager for our independence, because, according as we were taught and educated so also do we hope to live.

Head Of Dollar Company Sums Up Shipping Outlook Throughout The World

Frowns On Building Of More New Ships; Predicts Great Future For Trade On The Pacific Ocean

At London recently a representative of Lloyd's List and Shipping Gazette Weekly Summary asked Captain Robert Dollar, head of the Dollar Steamship Company, now on his way to New York from a trip around the world, what were the prospects of shipping generally throughout the world.

"The whole question," the Captain replied, "is one of supply and demand. At present there are more ships than there is business, but the demand is gradually increasing and quite a little change has taken place in the last few months. It is not pronounced, and there cannot be any real change while there are so many idle ships because as soon as there is an upward trend in trade out come the idle ships and the level of freights is not maintained."

"Was not this revival due to the Japanese disaster and the consequent demand for lumber and foodstuffs more than for any other reason?" he was asked.

"That is a myth. The people of the world thought Japan would want everything in tremendous quantities. It is true that she did, but there is another side to the matter which seemed to be forgotten by many: How were they going to pay for what was sent over? I have three large lumber mills of my own and I am therefore intensely interested, and for the past five or six years we have been averaging one big cargo a month to Japan. Personally, we have been able to obtain confirmed bankers' credits, but they have had the devil's own time to get these credits. To relieve the situation the Japanese Government secured a big loan from Great Britain and America, and that no doubt will be loaned to banks and then lent out to individuals. The business would be tremendous, but there must be the money. It was just the same with many European countries after the war. It was felt that they would have to have everything. That was found to be true, but the question came: How are you going to pay? A similar condition has prevailed in Japan."

Captain Dollar was asked his opinion of the recent proposal of Lord St. Davids, that the British Government should take part, in conjunction with shipowners, in speculative shipbuilding. The veteran shipowner shook his head. "Lord," he said, "look at all the idle ships throughout the world! I think the Government should take steps to furnish employment, but it should be employment of a kind that would be a little more remunerative than the building of ships. It would be better to build ships, of course, than to pay men for doing nothing, but there are other directions in which men could be employed. Money could be spent on the manufacture of some kind of product which could even be sold at a slight loss. It is not only the paying out of the money that is a loss to a country, but where nothing is done in return the system is demoralising to a man. The last thing that any self-respecting man wants in this world is to be a pauper."

U. S. SHIPPING REGULATIONS

The conversation turned upon the vexed question of American shipping. Captain Dollar's comment was characteristic of the man. "When there's politics in it," he said, "you don't know a thing about it! Goodness knows what will happen! The American Government is trying to sell its ships and nobody wants to buy, though possibly there might be some advantage in buying ships in some trades. I was talking to some British shipowners only yesterday about American shipping conditions. In this great Pacific Ocean trade it is a remarkable fact that though there are hundreds of American ships employed, very few are privately owned. The Pacific Ocean trade has increased tremendously, but private shipowning is impossible on account of the laws and regulations which govern conditions there. The laws have got to be changed first. I aways put the matter in this one concrete way: change the laws so that they are exactly the same as the British Board of Trade Rules and Regulations, and so place American shipping on an equal basis with that of Great Britain. Otherwise, it is of no use.

"We have a seaman's act, but they are afraid to enforce it because, they say, it would tie up the commerce of the land! For every port we enter we have to pay 50 percent of a man's wages, so that he can go ashore and get drunk! They put through a bill which says that for any repairs, or painting, or work of any kind done in an American ship in a foreign country, a tax of 50 per cent must be paid. If British owners had to carry on business under such conditions, how would they like it? I mentioned this to some British owners when trying to disabuse their minds that they were going to be badly hurt by the situation that has arisen, and I think they agreed with me. Last year the taxpayer had to find $50,000,000. This year it is rather less—about $40,000,000. If the ships were given away I do not think it would pay to run them while the law remains as it is."

Captain Dollar added that great as had been the increase in the Pacific Ocean trade, it was certain that the growth would be still greater in the future. The returns in regard to the Panama Canal and the Suez Canal for the past nine months showed a considerable excess of tonnage passing through the Panama, and if the same proportion continued for the remaining three months of the year, the total for the Panama Canal would be about 25,000,000 tons as against 22,700,000 tons for the Suez Canal. He had not at the moment, he said, been able to obtain exact statistics, but the comparison would give an idea of the way Pacific trade was extending. "I was at Singapore recently," he added. "Singapore is the gateway, to the Far East and Panama is the gateway from the other side."

OPINION OF SHIPOWNERS

It need hardly be said that Captain Dollar has a high opinion of the British shipowner. "Shipowners," he continued, "have made Great Britain what she is in the world of commerce." Regarding the future of the world's trade, his firm opinion is that the chief development will be in connection with China. "There are," he points out, "500,000,000 people in that vast country, only a very small part of which has been 'scratched' by Europeans. The Chinese are workers, all of them, and as modern ideas are instilled into them there will be a wonderful development of trade. I cannot say too much in favor of the Chinese. I have sold millions of dollars' worth of goods to that country and have not lost a single dollar."

Discussing the immigration problem, Captain Dollar said: "There is no question that we were getting foreigners into America faster than we could assimilate them. I think now, however, that the quota is cut down to almost vanishing point. If they could only discriminate even more between the kinds of immigrants coming in! We would welcome with open arms the British immigrant, but of Italians and Russians and so forth, we have too many already. That, again, however, is politics."

Like other Americans who come over to this country, says the paper, which is published at London, Captain Dollar is surprised at the amount of interest aroused here by the question of prohibition. He would not think of referring to the matter, he said, had the question not been raised; none the less, he expressed himself with characteristic frankness. "Prohibition has been a Godsend to the American nation," he said. "You hear sometimes a good deal of talk from the 'loud mouthed whisky man' that America is a back number. Trouble arose because the American Government did not want to enforce the law to the letter right away. Before prohibition came in, however, whisky was a back number with the commercial men of the United States. The great beneficiaries of prohibition are the working men. That is shown by the savings bank deposits. I am a director of the biggest savings bank in San Francisco, where the accounts are increasing yearly. In conversation with the manager recently, I inquired the reason, and asked whether he had taken means to try to increase the business, and his reply was, 'It's prohibition.' The money had been going there instead of to the saloons. The money had been diverted into different channels, and you can judge which are the best. To the rich prohibition did not matter; it is the poor working man who has benefited."

HAYNES FREED ON CHARGES IN BRITISH COURT

Magistrate Refuses To Take Jurisdiction And Cases Are Dismissed

Charges of obtaining credit without vouchsafing the information that he was an undischarged bankrupt, which were brought against Mr. Leslie Haynes, were dismissed by Magistrate G. W. King in the British Police Court yesterday.

At the opening of the continued hearing yesterday, a fourth charge of obtaining credit of $145 from Y. Sing Yee, of 430-431 Nanking Road, without informing him that he was a discharged bankrupt, was brought against Mr. Haynes.

Mr. E. T. Maitland, prosecuting for the police, stated that as regards the charge of carrying on business under another name, he wished to withdraw it. The principal witness in that charge would have been Mr. Hartman as to transactions regarding which the court had already said it would not take jurisdiction because those transactions took place in England. The other witness on that charge could not be found in Shanghai.

The magistrate recalled that on the previous day he had intimated there would be some difficulty as to the jurisdiction of the court in all these cases. He asked Mr. Maitland to show him that the court had jurisdiction in all the cases.

Mr. Maitland contended that the court had jurisdiction in the case, inasmuch as it was a case under English law and this was a British court. Under the Order in Council the court was entitled to exercise criminal jurisdiction in China in accordance with the laws of England, and this was the case of a man who had committed an offence against English law by failing to represent himself as an undischarged bankrupt to people with whom he did business in China.

The magistrate asked Mr. Maitland whether he could show him that where a man was made a bankrupt in China and went to England and obtained credit in that country, the courts in England could take jurisdiction and convict him.

Mr. Maitland held that they could, provided it could be proved that the man was an undischarged bankrupt. In any case the Supreme Court in China was really nothing but a branch of the Supreme Court of England.

The magistrate disagreed with Mr. Maitland on this point, since, he said, the Supreme Court for China was a court functioning on an extra-territorial basis. It was not the same and it was not a branch. It was no more a branch of the Supreme Court of England than were the courts of Australia, New Zealand or Canada.

After further argument the magistrate refused jurisdiction in the case, reminding Mr. Maitland that he could appeal if he wished. With that Mr. Haynes was discharged.
